

Police Interviewer: It's August 6th, 2023, and we're talking with Terrence Frost. Mr. Frost, do you consent to having your voice recorded for the purpose of this interview?

Suspect: Yes.

Police: Mr. Frost is present with his attorney--

Suspect: You're darn right I am.

Police: Mr. Frost, we just want to ask you a few questions about the incident last night, and your behavior after it happened. You knew what had happened in the show foyer of the blue locker room, and yet, when you were notified...you continued with the event as usual? Didn't even cross your mind to postpone?

Suspect: Postpone? chuckles We've got eight thousand people in the seats, total gate north of four million. Five hundred thousand pay-per-view buys at home. What are we gonna do? mock voice "Hey, uh, sorry everyone, there was a heart attack on site, so we're canceling the event? Thanks for your eighty bucks, suckers!" Oh wait I know what we do, we just refund millions of dollars, right? That's what you want us to do?

Police: gruffly Mr. Frost, this was not a heart attack, this was murder.

Suspect: So you say.

Police: Given the circumstances though, you didn't think it was proper to let the police, the EMTs, those people do their jobs, even if it meant a delay in--

Suspect: Look I'm gonna stop you right there. I have seen everything in this business. I have seen fights canceled the morning of because the fighter can't bounce back from the weight cut. I have seen fights scratched ten minutes before walkout because some guy got food poisoning and was throwing up in the john. Heck one time, down in Dallas, we brought the film crew back to set up for a fighter's walkout, know what we saw? Guy had an argument in his camp, trainer or somebody got mad and walked out, but he left a huge steaming number two right in the show foyer. A big fresh pile. It was right there, and it stunk so bad that we--

Police: Okay, we're getting a little off-topic here. So even after what happened to one of your contracted fighters right in the locker room foyer, you didn't make any changes to the event?

Suspect: We let the casino medical team into the area, they took over from there, once it was empty again, we got on with the rest of the show. No one said anything about a murder or even a death. Like I said weird stuff happens all the time back there.

Suspect's lawyer: Are we done here? pause Sounds like we're done here. Gentlemen, you have my card if you need anything else.
